His activities received considerable attention from Thomas W. Lawson in his book, "Frenzied Finance." and by many financiers he was blamed for the heavy financial reverses that overtook many gas companies.

He built gas works in Jersey City and in Boston, Brooklyn and Chicago, obtaining franchises for the laying of pipes and the producing of gas and then sub-letting the contracts for himself. By this means he was able to make tremendous profits on whatever original in-vestment he put into the gas schemes. He was the prime mover in what was known as the Chicago Gas Trust in 1882. al. These troubles, added to the fact that his marital life took on troublesome turns, soon depleted his fortune, and by 1908 he had started down hill toward poverty if not actual want. His fortune dwindled so that for several years after he had given over his ambition to control the political fortunes of Delaware and had been driven out of Delaware politics by the du Pont interests, he was unable to raise the few thousand dollars demanded by the courts as bail in at-tachment proceedings and spent some time in Ludlow street jail. He is said to have spent $3,000,000 on his political fights in Delaware, which lasted from 1889 to about 1906.

The process servers at length located him in Hoboken, where he was living in an exceptionally cheap tenement house, without gas or light—his light and heating gas had been turned off by the same company he had formerly controlled because he was unable to pay his bills—and he fled through the window to escape them. This was in 1907, and he kept effectually out of their way until 1918, when he was finally apprehended on a judgment for $15,000 obtained in 1910 by Hiram M. Burton.

"How long the stillness of pain and fury and horror lasted there was no one to reckon. It was most startlingly broken by a voice. Who screamed for help?' it said, and at the same instant a draught of icy air smote Joan. The door had opened with suddenness and violence. With difficulty she mastered her pain and turned her head. Pierre had staggered to his feet. Opposite him, framed against the open door filled with the wan whiteness of the snow, stood a spare, tall figure. The man wore his fur collar turned up about his chin and ears, his fur cap pulled down about his brow, a sharp aquiline nose stood out above frozen mustaches, keen and brilliant eyes searched the room. He carried his gun across his arm in readiness, and snuffed the air like a suspicious hound. Then he advanced a step toward Pierre.

What devil's work have you been at?' said he, his voice cutting the air in its sharpness of astonished rage, and his hand slid down slong the handle of his yun.

Pierre, wetching him like a lynx, side-stepped, crouched, whipped out his yun, and fired. At almost the same second the other's yun went off. Pierre dropped.

This time Joan's nerves gave way and the room, with its smell of scorched flesh, of pouder, and of frost, went from her horrified senses. For a moment the stranger's stern face and brilliant eyes made the approaching center of a great cloud of darkness, then it too went out."

How Joan woke to find herself in the luxurious hunting lodge of the man who had shot her husband; the blossoming of the primitive and passionate woman of the wilderness in this hothouse air; and the strange career that led her from a mountain cabin to the stage of a metropolitan theatre, are described in a novel that Rex Beach calls "One of the strongest and best told stories I have read."

Speed—and the price of Meat

Forty-eight hours after cattle are purchased by Swift & Company they are hanging up as meat; within two weeks the fresh meat has been sold.

This speed means money in the pocket of the one who raises the live stock and of the one who eats the meat. It means a rapid "turnover" of capital and investment-making possible the transaction of daily business on a narrower margin of profit.

Speed permits Swift & Company to do a successful business on a profit of a fraction of a cent per pound.

Such speed, with its rapid turnover and smaller profits would be impossible without the efficient organization and wide scope of Swift & Company, the results of fifty years' experience in handling meat.

Do you believe that government interference with the complicated and efficient machinery of the packing industry can be of any benefit? Experience with government regulation of railroads and telephone and telegraph might suggest an answer.
